

Brief Profile

NAOKI TANAKA

Currently President of Center for International Public Policy Studies

Naoki Tanaka, Ph.D., is Japan's leading economic advisor, serving both the business community and the highest levels of government. A decade ago, he helped to create the 21st Century Public Policy Institute established by Nippon Keidanren (the Japan Business Federation) and served as its first president. Among his numerous government-related positions, he is best known for his work as a special economic advisor to former PM Junichiro Koizumi, acting as one of the lead architects of Koizumi's landmark postal system reform. Tanaka is the author of many books and the recipient of the prestigious Yoshino Sakuzo Prize and Ishibashi Tanzan Prize. He is a graduate of the University of Tokyo with a doctorate in economics.